Preface.

One of the most pathetic passages in English literature is Dr. Samuel Johnson's preface to his dictionary. His long task ended, he realizes that those who may attempt to read his book through in course will find the plot rather disconnected, and that even those who are to enjoy the fruits of his laborious years will do so without a thought of the compiler. Even so with the author of this Catalogue, in whom the task at last accomplished has somehow awakened for the first dictionary-maker a fellow feeling wondrous kind.

And yet, somewhere in the wide domain of letters, there is to be found a sentence in which an author, in an unguarded moment, breaks forth into thanks that God had put it into the hearts of some men to make dictionaries. May we not hope that some still more devout soul, in some later and better age, may yet bless the illusion that has led some men to compile Alumni Catalogues?

Completed such a task as this can never be; but there comes a time, even in the compilation of a Catalogue, when the work of attending to belated replies must cease, and when the biographer must firmly put an end to all further marriages, and even to all new and crying additions to alumni households. That time has come, and all who have failed to arrange their biographical affairs accordingly must hereafter forever hold their peace.

Two months ago an individual letter on the subject was mailed to the best available address of each of the 875 graduates whose names make up this, Northwestern's roll of honor. After continuous sifting and remailing of returned letters, about fifty of these have failed entirely of finding the addressee, and over a hundred alumni have neglected, wilfully or otherwise, to respond. All addresses thus left in doubt for one reason or another, are marked with a dagger. "Is it a dagger that I see before me?" is a quotation that is recommended, with due animosity, to all such as are thus reminded, upon opening this book, that they ignored the Historian's billets-doux.

It is the fond hope of the writer that the work begun in this Catalogue, and representing but one of the departments of the University, may be taken up by each of the other Alumni Associations comprising the University Council. The motto of that body: "Not one Alumni Association, but one University," expresses the sentiment that must underlie the amplification and completion of this alumni biographical work. Allow me to suggest and urge that the Alumni Association of each department collect and publish the data relating to all graduates of that department, thus completing the great volume of which this is but the first chapter. The Alumni can do no greater favor than this to the great institution of which they form so important a part. A joint record of the triumphs of all the graduates would be one of the very strongest bonds of union between departments unfortunately isolated, and would do more than anything else to keep bright that interest in University affairs which, to the alumnus, is all too likely to decrease inversely as the square of the distance, and which makes even of the swift succession of commencement days but a retreating comet with an increasingly nebulous tail.

Errors, both of omission and of commission, there undoubtedly are in this volume; but the complaisant compiler hereby assures the critics that, if there are errors, they are due, not to lack of care, but to lack of data. The incompleteness that is more or less apparent on every page of this book is but the suggestion of a duty on the part of every alumnus who possesses the lacking information. All such corrections should be mailed to the Alumni Recorder, Prof. James T. Hatfield, Evanston, Illinois, who has undertaken the task of keeping up the work begun in this volume, and of setting down upon an extensive card catalogue the aforesaid corrections, all and singular, as fast as they are brought to his notice. It would be but an act of due loyalty if every alumnus of the College of Liberal Arts were to communicate with Prof. Hatfield once each year. It certainly will be the bounden duty of every alumnus who changes his address to apprise the Alumni Recorder of the change. In this way alone can the work now begun be kept accurate and be made of permanent value.

It is the present intention to republish the Alumni Catalogue every two or three years, or, at farthest, every five years. But, as the bare mechanical cost of the present edition is over $400, and as a later edition will be likely to cost considerably more, it is not an expenditure that can be repeated every year, or entered into lightly. This is an enterprise, however, that must be undertaken and maintained by every large educational institution, and the Alumni Association is the proper party to shoulder the burden of it. Need it be added that every alumnus should be a member of this Association?

The compilation of a Catalogue like this is something that should have been attended to by the graduates of Northwestern University long ago; if it had been, the work upon this volume would not have been so outrageously arduous as it was. Few of the alumni who will lightly read over the brief paragraphs devoted to themselves and to a dozen or two of their classmates, will realize that each of these names represents from two to six autograph letters, and more than half-a-dozen copyings and revisions of the matter involved. In fact, many of the names still left bare of biographical details stand for more work than the others, for in some cases nearly a dozen letters have been written in attempting to trace these fugitives to their hiding places. When these facts are taken into consideration, a great part of the vanished leisure of the Historian's last two years is accounted for. An amanuensis has, besides, devoted six weeks of all-day work to this task since the beginning of last April.

To the constant and self-sacrificing loyalty of Mrs. Marie Huse Wilder we owe the original collection of most of the biographical data upon which this book has been based. The patient pertinacity with which she for several years bombarded the older alumni with statistical blanks and begging letters that asked only for data, deserves more of a reward than a mere "thank you," in the preface of a book that will, in the majority of cases, be laid upon the attic shelf after ten minutes' perusal.

From the data collected by Mrs. Wilder has grown the present volume, through compilation, elimination, and amplification, by all the means at hand. Others, to whom the Historian personally owes a debt of gratitude for drudgery shared, are Frank M. Elliot, Frank B. Dyche, Miss Lydia L. Jones, Prof. James T. Hatfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Raddin, Giles Hubbard, Miss Lodilla Ambrose, O. M. Howard, Henry M. Echlin, R. Roy Shuman and Jesse J. Shuman. And allow the compiler here also to thank the many other loyal friends who have aided by furnishing some missing link of fact, or resurrecting some name or address from the limbo of the lost. As proof of his deep sincerity, the Historian hereby gracefully tenders to all these the boon and privilege of criticising this book. Strictures from all other sources are strictly prohibited.

A word in explanation of the system followed in the gigantic work of "boiling down" the original data in order to bring them within hailing distance of a "hard-times" exchequer. Wherever possible or expedient, words have been abbreviated and repetitions avoided. For instance, when the profession is given as "Physician" or "Minister," the corresponding degrees of M.D. or B.D. are omitted; it is taken for granted that they have been attained, as in nearly all cases they have. The use of the broader word "Teacher" in place of professor, educator, instructor, and the rest, was found necessary on account of the impossibility of drawing a satisfactory line between the more technical terms.

College honors have been omitted entirely, unless the membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society be an exception. Any attempt to mention even the Kirk prize was found to lead to invidious distinctions, for there are now other prizes of equal value, and lack of space forbade a mention of all. The names of the Greek Letter Fraternities have been inserted at the last moment; hence, if there are omissions in this regard, they must be attributed to haste and a bad pen.

The great diversity in the quantities of material sent in by the various graduates has necessarily been toned down and each biography brought within the bounds of the same standard, while yet preserving as much individuality as possible. It has, however, been a matter of constant regret on the part of the compiler that the pruning-knife had to be used so often and so ruthlessly. The reader is assured that the Historian did not adopt this skeleton-outline style of treatment without first having tried a more pretentious method and having found it impractical.

Many will, therefore, find in these pages much less than they anticipated; others, perhaps, will find more than they like. Every one who has to deal with the printing of people's names early learns the wide diversity of opinion entertained by good citizens as to what the public should or should not know concerning their personal affairs. It is, indeed, an aphorism among reporters, that people to be interviewed are divisible into three classes: those who talk too much, those who talk too little, and those who will not talk at all. All these characters the compiler of this work has of course encountered, even to several who asked to have their names omitted entirely. Those who erred on the side of "muchness" are gratefully remembered by the writer, though he could not use all the material. While all reasonable requests have as far as possible been respected, all questions as to what was to go in or stay out have been decided solely with a view to the greatest good of the greatest number. So far as known, no name has been omitted.

The photogravure portraits of all the Presidents and Acting Presidents of the University since the beginning, which are herewith presented, will, it is believed, prove a valuable addition to the permanent archives of the institution, as several of them are now published for the first time. Though certain of the portraits of early Presidents had to be taken from small and poor photographs, and are therefore not as good as those of the later ones, no expense has been spared to make each as perfect as possible. It was also the original intention to incorporate in this volume a brief history of the University, but the already healthy size of the book and the lack of time have crowded this out. It is to be hoped that it will be made a feature of the next edition.

In relinquishing the chronicler's pen the writer wishes to pronounce his heartfelt and solemn Dominus Vobiscum upon the devoted head of his successor, and to assure an inquiring world that the joys bound up in the proud title "Historian," are not for a moment to be compared with those that cluster around that of "Ex-Historian."
